

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

This chapter allocates conclusions of this study and the suggestions for further study. The first part of this chapter is aimed at giving concluding remarks on the present study. Due to the limitation and weaknesses of this study, the second part of this chapter presents several suggestions for further study.

5.1. Conclusions

The findings of this study compile the results which answered the research question of this study. The result of this study proved that there is a significant difference in the use of language learning strategies between male and female college students. The frequency of language learning strategies also showed that female college students employed more strategies than did male college students.

Since it is important for the students to understand the importance of using language learning strategies in the process of language learning, it is important for the lecturers to deliver this point to their college students.

5.2. Suggestions

The present study examined merely the significance difference of language learning strategies use by gender. Moreover, it is not enough to focus on the difference application of language learning strategies by gender. It is worthwhile to investigate the factors lies behind the chosen strategies by gender for the next studies. Also, the gender's understanding about the importance of using language learning strategies for the process of language learning is also worth to be observed.
