ABSTRACT

This study was aimed at finding out the English-Indonesian subtitle translation procedures and analyzing the quality of its translation. A qualitative case study was used as a conceptual framework for collecting the data. In order to systematically conduct the study, 300 sentences of the film subtitle were selected by using sampling interval method as the sample to analyze and three persons who are experienced in translation field were asked to judge the quality of English-Indonesian subtitle translation. It was compared with the researcher judgment based on the good translation theories from some experts, such as Larson (1998), Nida, Lewis, and Leonard Foster (1958) in Venutti (2000), Newmark (1988), Tytler (1979) in Munday (2001), Benjamin (1969/2000) in Munday (2001), and Massoud (1988) and El Shafey (1985) in Abdellah (2005). The findings obtained from the analysis show that there are nine translation procedures used in the film subtitle based on Newmark (1988), Vinay and Darbelnet (2000) in Munday (2001), Dryden in Munday (2001), Catford (1965) in Munday (2001), Delisle, Lee-Jahnke & Cormier (1999), and Harvey (2003) theories, those are: literal, transference, cultural equivalent, shift, compensation, reduction and expansion, paraphrase, the combination of procedures, such as couplets, triplets, and quadruplets, and some untranslated sentences. Then, the English-Indonesian film subtitle that has already been judged by the researcher and by the three persons who are experienced in translation field was qualified and fulfilled the criteria of good translation. Finally, from the result of the research, the further study about subtitle translation is expected to conduct more comprehensive analysis of its translation procedures and quality.
