

CONCLUSION

This study discovered there are differences as well as similarity between the two media in structurally constructed and connected their ideas in the news articles. Therefore, it is evident that the sequences realized grammatically in a clause complex within the six news articles shows the way the two media constructed their intended meanings. While JakartaPost develops its news articles in clarity and detailed news reporting of the conflict in Gaza by using elaboration and locution relation, BBC News develops its news articles in a dynamic and multifaceted news reporting to present a multifaceted narrative by using extension and locution relation. This study is limited by the utilization of merely three newspaper publications from each media as the primary data set. Consequently, it may lead to the limitation of taxis system and logical function occurred in Jakarta Post and BBC Daily Newspaper. As written media communication continues to grow, future research should delve into and explore other kinds of texts to discover how ideas are constructed and linked to make meaning.