ABSTRACT

Danyi Riani (2014). Healing Model for Victims of Narcotics, Psychotropic Drugs and Other Addictive Substances Abuse (An Exploratory Study of the Methods, Skills, and Roles for Victims of Narcotics, Psychotropic Drugs and Other Addictive Substances at Pondok Pesantren Suryalaya)*

The background to the research was the increasing number of victims of Narcotics, Psychotropic Drugs and Other Addictive Substances as well as the fact that there had been no counsellors who were directly involved in the community in order to mentor victims of Narcotics, Psychotropic Drugs and Other Addictive Substances abuse. It aimed to combine methods, roles, and skills employed at Ponpes Suryalaya with those used in the field of Guidance and Counseling. The research employed qualitative method with collaborative action research. A total of 10 mentored students at Ponpes Suryalaya who participated as the research subjects were selected based on purposive random sampling. The findings were in the forms of: (1) Repentance bathing method, prayer method, remembrance of God method, and fasting method employed at Ponpes Suryalaya; (2) Empty-chair method, reality method, and self-esteem method in guidance and counseling; (3) A combination of the skills and roles used at Ponpes Suryalaya and those in Guidance and Counseling. The research findings are recommended for: (1) The development of both theories and practices in the professional field of Guidance and Counseling and the implications on professional social workers in order to mentor victims of Narcotics, Psychotropic Drugs and Other Addictive Substances abuse; (2) Ponpes Suryalaya in order to adopt the new values from guidance and counselling; (3) The future researchers to further study the issue; and (4) The decision makers at Bandung Center of Education and Training of Social Welfare to be made inputs and considerations for “The Needs for Mentoring Education and Training for victims of Narcotics, Psychotropic Drugs and Other Addictive Substances abuse”.
