ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

My sincere gratitude goes to Mr. Bachrudin Musthafa, M.A., Ph.D. for guiding me through the process of this research and correcting my writing to be better. His kindness and encouragement are very much appreciated. I would also like to thank the teachers in English Literature program, for opening up my mind and making me see the world differently. I have learned a lot, not only in academic matters but also in other subjects the teachers managed to bring up in the classroom.

I would also like to thank my family – Mom, for the never-ending love, patience and support you have for me; my dear sister, Rahma, for believing in me; my cousins, Andin and Galuh, for listening and understanding me through thick and thin.

My gratitude also goes to the students of English Lit B 2010 – Caesar, Netta, Novia, Seruni Gita, Arinda, Chinta, Nunik, Rani, Fatih, Nanda Satia, and Fadhlil – for the enjoyable discussions, funny moments and shared jokes in our classroom. Special thanks to Dony, for supporting me all these years through thick and thin. Thank you for all the laughs and joy, for befriending a person as weird and quirky and distant as me. Happy tears are coming.

To GGW – Moecthia, Pritania, Bayu, Tian, Aulia and our plus friend, Cynthia – I hope we can stay together until we all have grey hair and walking sticks. I deeply value our friendship, I sure hope you guys feel the same way.

Last but not least, I'm dedicating this thesis to my Dad. I really wish you were still here to see me graduate. Your little daughter is now.....still little, but growing up.
