COMING-OUT : GAY'S SELF DISCLOSURE SINCE TEENAGERS

ABSTRACT

Rahmatika Septina Chairunnisa (1204471). "Coming-Out : Gay's Self Disclosure Since Teenagers". Final Paper to Psychology Department UPI. Bandung (2016).

This qualitative research using a phenomenology design is intended to explore gay coming-out process which has been done since teenagers through self-disclosure. The respondents of the research are two gays who have been done the coming-out process since teenagers, who were collected by using a purposive sampling method. The collecting data is conducted by using in-depth interview technique and anecdotal record which has been analyzed from an open axial selective coding recording result. The result of the research shows that coming-out process has been done by YO through self-disclosure to his parents and continues to his bestfriends as the hardest part that he has been through. The self-disclosure continues to his other friends when YO has accepted himself as a gay. The self-disclosure which has been done by YO always get a positive respond because of the closeness of YO's relationship with his partner and the different approach when YO does the self-disclosure to his partner to avoid their shock respond. YO decides to do the self-disclosure to people because he feels more powerful and better afterwards. On the other hand, the coming-out process has been done by NA through self-disclosure to his close friend after he has accepted himself as a gay. NA does the self-disclosure to his friends that he has been thought to have the closeness and care to him so NA thinks that he will be accepted by his friends. NA does the self-disclosure only to certain people to avoid the rejection from his environment in order to avoid negative effect that happens to him. After he has done the self-disclosure, NA feels free and comfortable because he does not need to hide his sexual orientation and experience a strong mental change to face the current problem.
