

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

From the findings of present study, the writer concludes that caricature as exaggerated picture of a person or things can be used as means to advocate ideology. Caricature is a way of illustrators conveying his/her ideas, opinion, or even criticism towards phenomenon through picture. Caricatures are usually used as a way of protest or criticism.

It could be assumed that caricature can be used as an effective way to criticize the government. The critical issues towards politics, economics, socials, cultures, etc, becomes an interesting thing to be read through the parody of caricature.

In their caricature, Benny and Mice advocate their political ideology that is transformative criticism ideology. This political ideology is advocated through the representation of reality in the form of caricature which is illustrated with irony, allusion, and hyperbole.

5.2 Suggestion

In regard with the research that has been elaborated in this paper, the writer proposed some suggestions for further research. First, for the improvement of further research, it would be better to use more appropriate approach such as visual grammar. Remembering that this kind of approach has never been discussed in the class, the writer suggests that in the future, this approach should be introduced to the students, especially in the English Department.

Second, it is expected that research investigates caricatures would be more developed in the future, caricature offer meanings and ideologies that make them interesting to be investigated.
